GW TO HOLD CONFERENCE ON INNOVATIONS IN CORRECTIONS

Supreme Court Chief Justice Warren E. Burger is the featured speaker at a Monday, June 18 conference titled "Factories With Fences: The Prison Industries Approach to Correctional Dilemmas," to be held at The George Washington University's Lisner Auditorium (730 21st St., NW). The conference will focus on how American prisons can solve problems such as high costs, idleness, and overcrowding by converting our human warehouses into "factories with fences."

Participants will include opinion leaders and policy makers from a range of public and private organizations that understand the urgency for dealing with the nation's correctional problems. The conference is from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Chief Justice Burger will speak at 9:45 a.m.

After opening remarks by GW President Lloyd H. Elliott, Brookings Institution President Bruce K. MacLaury, a film, and the Chief Justice's address, the conference will feature a summary of a January "Factories With Fences" conference by National Can Corporation President Frank Considine. Four panel discussions of prison industry issues and a luncheon program will follow.

Associate Attorney General D. Lowell Jensen will lead a discussion on current issues in corrections with senior legislative and executive officials. Panelists include U.S. Senator Mark

O. Hatfield (R-OR); U.S. Representative Robert W. Kastenmeier (D-WI); Illinois State Representative Aaron Jaffe; and Department of Justice, Office of Justice Assistance Assistant Attorney General Lois H. Herrington.

From 1:45 p.m. to 2:55 p.m., Control Data Corporation

Chairman of the Board and Chief Executive Officer William

C. Norris will lead a discussion on the economic impact of prison industry with business and labor representatives, including U.S. Chamber of Commerce Vice Chairman of the Board Frank

From 3 p.m. to 3:40 p.m., Federal Bureau of Prisons Director Norman A. Carlson will lead a discussion with Arizona Department of Corrections Director James G. Ricketts; New York City Department of Corrections Commissioner Jacqueline McMickens; and National Association of State Purchasing Officials representative John E. Short (retired).

From 4:05 p.m. to 4:50 p.m., Sister Judith Schloegel,

Executive Director of Liberation of Ex-Offenders Through Employment Opportunities, will lead a discussion of the role of the community with media and community leaders, including Washington Post Syndicated Columnist William Raspberry; U.S. News and World
Report Legal Affairs Associate Editor Ted Gest; Justice Fellowship
Vice President Daniel W. Van Ness; and Minnesota Department of Corrections Executive Officer of Adult Release Les Green.

Sponsored by The George Washington University and the Brookings Institution Advanced Study Program, the conference is supported in part by the German Marshall Fund, which last summer helped finance a tour of Scandinavian prison industries by 12 American leaders. Prison made products and other exhibits will be on display throughout the conference.

The conference is free of charge and the public is invited. Prior registration is required. For more information, call GW's Department of Continuing Education, (202) 676-7032.

PROFESSOR EMERITUS GUIDO E. MAZZEO DIES

WASHINGTON, D.C.--Professor Emeritus of Romance Languages Guido E. Mazzeo, 69, died of cancer at the George Washington University Hospital on Tuesday, June 5, 1984. He was a resident of Springfield, Virginia.

Born in New York City, August 14, 1914, he held degrees from City College of New York (B.A. 1936); and Columbia University (M.A. 1938 and Ph. D. 1961). Prior to coming to Washington in 1946, he taught at Fordham University, City College of New York and Columbia University. From 1946 to 1950, he was an assistant professor of Spanish at the U.S. Navy Postgraduate

School in Washington, D.C. In 1950, he became associated with the Inter American Defense Board as a conference document specialist and simultaneous translator. He remained in that position until 1958 when he became a full-time member of The George Washington University faculty in 1958 as associate professor of Romance languages. He has been teaching part time at George Washington since 1946. He became full professor of Romance languages in 1968 and received the status of professor emeritus on May 6 of this year.

He served as chairman of the GW Department of Romance Languages and Literatures from 1977 to 1983.

He was a member of the Modern Language Association; the American Association of Teachers of Spanish and Portuguese; the American Society for 18th Century Studies; and Sigma Delta Pi, national Spanish honor society.

A frequent contributor to scholarly journals, Dr. Mazzeo wrote in both Spanish and English. He was a member of the editorial board of The Hispanic Journal, and the author of two books, The Abate Juan Andres, Literary Historian of the XVIII Century. Hispanic Institute in the U.S., 1965, and Ensayos espanoles, Prentice-Hall, Englewood Cliffs, New Jersey, 1973.

At George Washington, he served as a member of the Faculty Senate, an advisory body to GW President Lloyd H. Elliott, and as chairman of the Faculty Senate Committee on the Library.

He is survived by his wife, Avelina, of the Springfield home; a daughter, Mrs. Margarita Mazzeo Miller of Burke, Virginia; a sister, Miss Immaculata Mazzeo of New York City; and one granddaughter, Cristina.

In lieu of flowers, contributions in Professor Mazzeo's memory may sent to the Gelman Library Gift Fund, 701 Gelman Library, The George Washington University, Washington, D.C. 20052, to be used to enlarge the collection of books in Spanish literature.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

GW SURVEY FINDS POLITICS AS TEFLON-COATED AS IS RONALD REAGAN

A national survey conducted during the primary campaign reveals that most of the major political developments of the last year have gone un-noticed (or at least not remembered) by the majority of the American people.

According to Michael Robinson and Maura Clancey, directors of the Media Analysis Project at The George Washington University, some of the year's biggest news stories have failed almost totally to penetrate public awareness.

Results from their nationwide poll, in the most recent "Public Opinion Magazine," indicated that:

- **Almost 23 percent of the adult population could not recall a single news event from the last 12 months.
- **One quarter of the sample had never heard the name of Ed Meese, top White House advisor and attorney general designate.
  - **Three-quarters of the public has never heard the name of Charles Wick, USIA director and focus of several major controversies during the last two years. Only two percent knew anything about Wick's troubles.
  - **Almost two-thirds of the sample did not know which Democratic candidate for president had changed his name (Gary Hart).

Not even the basic facts of the economy seem to stick, the authors said. The survey of 400 randomly selected respondents found that most Americans weren't sure which way the inflation rate had moved under Reagan—when actually, inflation had dropped dramatically during the past three years. Less than half knew that the unemployment rate in the United States has been going down during the past six months.

"About the only thing that seems to get through," said Robinson, "is news about primary victories and defeats—and slogans. A larger percentage of the population knew about Mondale's using 'Where's the beef?' as a campaign question, than knew about basic economic indicators, such as inflation and unemployment."

"We also found there is something to the notion that Ronald Reagan is a Teflon-coated candidate," Clancey said.

"Most Americans think that Ronald Reagan attends church regularly, despite that during the last year the President has gone to Sunday services only once."

"In addition, we found Reagan running 20 points ahead of his administration when we asked about the ethical standards practiced by Reagan and by his staff," she said.

Robinson concluded that the public seems to filter out much of the bad news about Reagan that appears in the news media. "But," he added, "the Teflon coating seems to extend well beyond the President. The public seems to be filtering out political news of virtually every kind. People just are not tracking what most politicians and journalists seem to think are the big news events of the day."

People just are not tracking what most politicians and journalists seem to think are the big news events of the day."

GW SURVEY FINDS POLITICS AS TEFLON-COATED AS IS RONALD REAGAN

A national survey conducted during the primary campaign reveals that most of the major political developments of the last year have gone un-noticed (or at least not remembered) by the majority of the American people.

According to Michael Robinson and Maura Clancey, directors of the Media Analysis Project at The George Washington University, some of the year's biggest news stories have failed almost totally to penetrate public awareness.

Results from their nationwide poll, in the most recent
"Public Opinion Magazine," indicated that:

- **Almost 23 percent of the adult population could not recall a single news event from the last 12 months.
- **One quarter of the sample had never heard the name of Ed Meese, top White House advisor and attorney general designate.
  - **Three-quarters of the public has never heard the name of Charles Wick, USIA director and focus of several major controversies during the last two years. Only two percent knew anything about Wick's troubles.
  - **Almost two-thirds of the sample did not know which Democratic candidate for president had changed his name (Gary Hart).

Not even the basic facts of the economy seem to stick, the authors said. The survey of 400 randomly selected respondents found that most Americans weren't sure which way the inflation rate had moved under Reagan—when actually, inflation had dropped dramatically during the past three years. Less than half knew that the unemployment rate in the United States has been going down during the past six months.

"About the only thing that seems to get through," said Robinson, "is news about primary victories and defeats—and slogans. A larger percentage of the population knew about Mondale's using 'Where's the beef?' as a campaign question, than knew about basic economic indicators, such as inflation and unemployment."

"We also found there is something to the notion that Ronald Reagan is a Teflon-coated candidate," Clancey said.

"Most Americans think that Ronald Reagan attends church regularly, despite that during the last year the President has gone to Sunday services only once."

"In addition, we found Reagan running 20 points ahead of his administration when we asked about the ethical standards practiced by Reagan and by his staff," she said.

Robinson concluded that the public seems to filter out much of the bad news about Reagan that appears in the news media. "But," he added, "the Teflon coating seems to extend well beyond the President. The public seems to be filtering out political news of virtually every kind. People just are not tracking what most politicians and journalists seem to think are the big news events of the day."

MASTER OF ASSOCIATION MANAGEMENT LAUNCHED BY GW'S SGBA

The School of Government and Business Administration (SGBA) of The George Washington University has established a Master of Association Management (MAM), which will begin with the fall semester, September 4, 1984. GW is the first university to offer a masters degree in association management. The MAM degree is designed to meet the continuing educational needs of association executives and prepare business students for careers with associations. Applications for September 1984 and January 1985 classes are now being accepted. Students considering degree candidacy may take up to three courses (nine semester hours) within the program as non-degree students.

The MAM curriculum is drawn from four departments within SGBA--business administration; public administration; management science, and accounting. The 42-credit hour program includes six interdisciplinary areas of instruction: Association Management; Comparative Institutions; Analytical and Research Methods; Communications and Information Systems; Marketing Strategies for Public Relations and Media, and Finance and Accounting.

Further information about the MAM program may be obtained by calling Professor David S. Brown at (202) 676-6619, or professor Astrid Merget (202) 676-6295. Admissions information may be obtained by writing to:

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

GW BOARD OF TRUSTEES RECOMMENDS
POLICY FOR LAW SCHOOL FUTURE

The Board of Trustees of the George Washington University decided today that the National Law Center should become a single law school unit, without separate daytime or evening divisions.

The announcement followed a special meeting of the GW Board at which a report on the future of the evening division, prepared by a five-member Trustee committee, was adopted unanimously.

By its action today, the GW Board transmitted the report through University President Lloyd H. Elliott to GW National Law Center Dean Jerome A. Barron with the suggestion that its recommendations be implemented beginning with the 1985-86 entering class.

"This action provides for full-time and part-time legal studies and for a common admissions pool with the same high standards for all admitted students," said President Elliott. "I am particularly pleased with this decision which seems to be satisfactory to all concerned," Elliott added.

The report states that, "As a matter of educational policy, the National Law Center, i.e. the law school of The George Washington University, should be a single law school with a single standard of admission from a single pool of applicants which will accommodate the widest possible range of students seeking a legal education including both full-time and part-time students."

The report outlines structural changes which should accompany the overall policy. These include: one single pool of applicants for law school registration to be judged by the same high standards and a structure of class schedules to accommodate students who wish to stretch out the period during which they complete requirements for graduation while working either full-time or parttime.

Board action taken today further provides: that there shall be no predetermined number of seats allocated to students as either full-time or part-time; that the structure worked out by the law school faculty must be fully acceptable to and clearly within the accreditation requirements of the Association of American Law Schools and the American Bar Association; and that no choice shall be required of a law school applicant as to either full-time or part-time study prior to his or her actual acceptance.

Dean Barron said, following the meeting, "This is a fair and workable plan which preserves the option of a part-time program for legal study, yet takes a step forward in providing for a common pool for applicants to the law school."

In the course of the deliberations of the special committee, chaired by GW Board Chairman Glen A. Wilkinson, all those who wished to appear, representing all points of view, were fully heard. In addition, the committee talked with a number of persons whose perspectives it was felt could add to the committee's understanding and to the resolution of the problem. The committee also accepted submissions from all interested parties.

MAURICE A. EAST NAMED DEAN AT GEORGE WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY

Maurice A. (Mickey) East has been named Dean of the George Washington University School of Public and International Affairs, effective January 10, 1985.

In making the announcement University President Lloyd H. Elliott said, "I am delighted to welcome Dr. East to the GW community. His scholarly accomplishments, wide reputation in international studies, and demonstrated leadership in higher education make him extremely well-qualified to provide the direction needed as we enter a period of planned advancement for our School of Public and International Affairs."

Commenting on his appointment, Dr. East said, "It is a great opportunity to be able to direct this School so ideally located in the nation's capital and in the center of world affairs. I look forward to joining my colleagues in building upon the present framework as we define the SPIA role for the future in educating persons to operate effectively in an increasingly international and multicultural environment."

Currently a Senior Fellow at the Strategic Concepts Development Center of the National Defense University in Washington, Dr. East has been employed at the University of Kentucky for the past 12 years. At Kentucky, he holds the rank of professor in the Department of Political Science, has served as Associate Director of the Patterson School of Diplomacy and International Commerce there, and has been active in numerous professional and community organizations.

Mickey East was a Phi Beta Kappa graduate of Colgate University in 1963. As a Woodrow Wilson Fellow, he did his graduate work at Princeton University, receiving the M. A. and Ph.D. in politics in 1966 and 1970. Later he was a Fulbright Research Fellow in Norway, and a Rockefeller Foundation Consultant to Makerere University in Uganda.

Dr. East is in the front rank among his peers in the field of comparative foreign policy studies, with a particular focus on the foreign policy problems and practices of smaller nation. He has served as an advisor to the government of Norway and to the Foreign Service Institute of the U.S. Department of State.

Professor East is active in the International Studies Association, the Center for War/Peace Studies, the United Nations Association, and is a member of the Board of Directors of the Social Sciences Education Consortium.

Dr. East and his wife, Jessie, have one son, named Barrett.
